Emergency Management Oceanside Launches New Website

The City of Parksville and Town of Qualicum Beach recently launched the new Emergency Management Oceanside website which will provide the residents of the Oceanside region with emergency preparedness related information and resources.

Emergency Management Oceanside recognizes emergencies can happen anytime and anywhere and our best defense is to be prepared. Residents play an important role in emergency preparedness complementing the emergency management programs now available in the Oceanside region. To help individuals and families be prepared, a website dedicated to emergency preparedness has been created.

www.emergencyoceanside.ca is mobile friendly with an easy to navigate menu. This website provides detailed information on how you can prepare for emergencies including what you should do before, during and after an emergency. As well, the site includes information on upcoming preparedness events and how residents can become involved. Over the coming months, new content and updates will be added to the new website.

The emergency programs for the City of Parksville and Town of Qualicum Beach work in unison to provide large scale emergency support and disaster service to residents of the Parksville-Qualicum Beach area. The Emergency Management Oceanside partnership provides an efficient, effective and cooperative approach to managing emergencies in our region. EMO provides professional 24/7 emergency support and has the capacity to develop and undertake preparedness, mitigation, response and recovery planning.
